

Dynamic Pricing for Fitness Classes

Business Recommendation Presentation

● Demand ● Time ● Location

Agenda

- | | | | | | |
|---|--------------------|---|-----------------------|---|-----------------|
| 1 | Business Problem | 4 | Price Elasticity | 7 | Results |
| 2 | Objectives | 5 | Demand Forecasting | 8 | Recommendations |
| 3 | Dataset & Analysis | 6 | Dynamic Pricing Rules | 9 | Conclusion |

Business Problem

Fixed pricing for all classes

Every session — peak or slow — is priced the same

Peak classes sell out quickly

High-demand slots leave revenue on the table

Low-demand classes underutilized

Empty seats represent lost opportunity

Opportunity to optimize revenue

Demand-based pricing can close both gaps

Class Utilization Snapshot

97%

Peak Class

38%

Off-Peak Class

Project Approach

A structured, five-stage pipeline turns raw booking data into a live pricing engine.

Dynamic Pricing Rules

+15%

≥ 90% Booking

+10%

80 – 89% Booking

+5%

60 – 79% Booking

–5%

< 40% Booking

Weekend, peak-hour, and top-location classes carry a small additional premium

A safety cap prevents extreme price swings for members

Business Results

₹99.33M

Current Revenue

₹113.64M

Expected Revenue

₹14.31M

Revenue Gain

14.40%

Revenue Growth

Customer Satisfaction

Discounts during low demand

Safety cap on prices

Fair pricing strategy across all members

Small, controlled price increases

Demand reviewed regularly

Business Recommendations

1

Increase Prices for High-Demand Classes

Charge a premium only for classes with consistently high booking rates.

2

Offer Discounts for Low-Demand Classes

Provide discounts to improve occupancy during off-peak hours.

3

Expand High-Demand Time Slots

Add more morning and evening classes where customer demand is highest.

4

Optimize Class Schedule

Reduce or reschedule low-performing classes to improve resource utilization.

5

Increase Capacity at Popular Locations

Allocate more trainers or sessions at high-demand fitness centers

6

Use Dynamic Pricing Instead of Fixed Pricing

Adjust prices based on demand, time, location, and class occupancy

Future Scope

AI-based pricing

Weather & event impact

Competitor price monitoring

Personalized offers

Real-time pricing dashboard

Conclusion

Dynamic pricing improves revenue while maintaining customer satisfaction — through demand-based pricing, controlled price changes, and clear business rules.

Thank You!